Map Your Field Site

Your field site may be your backyard, your schoolyard or a nearby area that you have chosen. This activity should be done as accurately as possible, so try to be as observant as possible as you walk.

Directions:

- 1. Walk the entire field site first, observing all the various features of your area.
- 2. Using a pencil, sketch major topographical features, buildings, and general areas.
- 3. Color each square on the grid within your field site to show what type of food source habitat is in that area/section of your field site. You may have multiple cells of one color and few cells of other colors.
- 4. Use the color chart below. If you find a type of habitat not listed on the chart, add it and assign it a color.
