

Levels of Support

The American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine (ACOEM) represents more than 6,000 physicians specializing in the field of occupational and environmental medicine (OEM). Founded in 1916, ACOEM is the nation's largest medical society dedicated to promoting the health of workers through preventive medicine, clinical care, research, and education. The College is committed to delivering excellence through its continuing medical education programs, which include its annual meetings – the spring American Occupational Health Conference (AOHC), the largest meeting of OEM professionals in the world; and the fall State-of-the-Art Conference (SOTAC). In addition, ACOEM offers a premier series of regularly scheduled courses in OEM which feature enhanced learning opportunities, distinguished faculty, and comprehensive resource materials. Additionally, the College is active in developing evidence-based position statements, consensus opinions statements, and guidelines on issues relevant to occupational and environmental health.

In order to maintain the level of excellence in programming and to continue to develop opinions on the latest scientific advances in occupational and environmental health, the College looks to both individuals and corporations for financial backing. By supporting these educational initiatives, you will not only be recognized at ACOEM's meetings and in its publications, but you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you are supporting physicians who protect the health and safety of the American worker and contribute to America's productivity.
